

Get the most out of your negatives

I love trying to find new ways of using my stash. Really making the most out of what I have. When using stickers or alphas, instead of throwing away the packaging next time, have a think of how you can use them. Here's a couple of ideas of how I use mine. Using one of my March challenge LOs as my example.

When you use up your stickers, cut around the outside of each sticker. This gives you just the outline of the shape, like a stencil.

Then place these sticker on your LO of where you would like them to appear.

I then take a glimmer mist and spray over. Make sure your photos aren't on your LO when you do this. You can also try paint, chalks and inks. When you lift the stickers you are left with the outline of your shape.

And this is the look you are left with.

The negatives from alphas can also be used. I had used up my 'f's' when I made this card, but love the look using the negative of the 'f' in it's place. Use the negatives to spray over or use as a stencil. Get a pen and draw around the shape instead.

I hope you find these ideas useful and have fun trying them out : )
